

2024 Annual Report

D E N S H Ō

Executive Director's Message

2024 made clear both the urgency of Densho's work and the responsibility we carry to steward our community's stories and voices. At a moment when public history and education face growing threats—from political pressure to the deliberate distortion and erasure of difficult truths—Densho has remained steadfast in our mission to preserve, protect, and share the history of Japanese American WWII incarceration.

Throughout the year, we took meaningful steps to safeguard this history amid a shifting national landscape. As institutions such as the National Archives face mounting pressures to minimize histories of injustice, Densho has continued to fortify and expand our own archival collections. By strengthening our digital infrastructure and adding new materials, we are ensuring that records of incarceration—from government data to personal testimony—remain available to scholars, educators, and communities now and into the future. Preserving history, particularly histories that challenge dominant narratives, is an act of care and of vigilance.

2024 was also shaped by connection and community. In March, I had the honor of participating in the Japanese American Leadership Delegation to Japan, an experience that reaffirmed for me the power of relationships that transcend borders. Often described as “bridges” between the United States and Japan, Japanese Americans embody identities that are not fixed but continually evolving. What binds us is not uniform experience, but a shared commitment to community and accountability. This belief was echoed throughout the year as I joined commemorations, gatherings, and educational events—for example, at the Hiroshima and Nagasaki remembrance ceremony in Seattle, where history, grief, and hope came together in collective reflection.

One of Densho's most important areas of growth in 2024 was our education work. While preserving history remains foundational to our organization, sharing it in ways that are meaningful, accessible, and responsive to today's learners is equally vital. This year, we invested in expanding our educational initiatives, developing new curricula, strengthening partnerships with educators, and broadening the narratives we bring into classrooms and public programs. These efforts are grounded in collaboration and informed by the diverse experiences of Japanese Americans before, during, and after incarceration, as well as by the intersections between our history and those of other marginalized communities. Education is where memory meets action, and where historical lessons can shape more just futures.

To support this growing work, we were thrilled to welcome two new staff members to the Densho team. Jennifer Noji joined us as Staff Writer and Project Manager for the 100 Films Project, collecting and preserving crucial films about the WWII incarceration. Additionally, Courtney Wai joined us as Education and Public Programs Manager, helping to expand our capacity to engage students, educators, and communities nationwide.

I am deeply grateful to our supporters, partners, and community members who make this work possible. Your belief in Densho sustains our efforts to protect history, foster connection, and educate present and future generations. As we look ahead, I am confident that together we will continue to meet the challenges of our moment with clarity, courage, and care.
